

The Hotel Fit Guide

Seven questions to answer before you spend $1,000 a night on the wrong hotel.

A five-star rating tells you what a hotel has. It does not tell you whether the hotel fits the way you travel.

The right choice depends on the room, the neighborhood, the service rhythm, and what you want to feel when you come back at the end of the day. These are the seven questions I use to make that decision with a client.

The expensive mistake is rarely choosing a bad hotel. It is choosing a very good hotel that is wrong for you.

01

Where do you want to be at 8 p.m.?

A hotel can be beautiful and still put you forty minutes from the part of the city you actually want after dinner. Start with the evening you want, then work backward to the neighborhood.

Ask yourself: Do you want to step into the action, or return to quiet?

02

What does the entry room actually feel like?

Hotel photography usually shows the suite, the terrace, or the one corner with the best light. The room category you will book may have a different size, outlook, and sense of privacy.

Ask yourself: What is the exact room category, square footage, view, and bed layout?

03

Will you use the hotel, or only sleep there?

A resort with three pools and a spa can be worth the rate when the property is part of the trip. In a city, the same spend may be better used on location and room quality.

Ask yourself: How many waking hours will you realistically spend on property?

04

What kind of service makes you comfortable?

Some travelers want a doorman who knows their name and a concierge who checks in. Others want privacy, speed, and no ceremony. More service is not always better service.

Ask yourself: Do you want to be recognized, left alone, or able to choose between both?

05

Which benefits change the real price?

Breakfast, property credit, upgrade priority, early check-in, and late checkout can change the value of a booking. Compare the final stay, not only the room rate.

Ask yourself: Which benefits will you actually use, and are they confirmed or only subject to availability?

06

What is the hotel's weak point?

Every hotel has one. Noise. Small rooms. Slow elevators. A remote setting. Uneven renovation. The useful review is the one that tells you whether the weakness matters to you.

Ask yourself: What do recent guests repeatedly criticize, and would it affect your trip?

07

What are you paying extra for?

Name the reason. A specific view. A location that saves an hour every day. A suite that lets the family stay together. A staff that can solve problems. If the premium has no clear job, it is probably not the right spend.

Ask yourself: What changes about the trip if you choose this hotel instead of the next-best option?

A simple shortlist

Keep three options: the best fit, the strongest value, and the safest fallback. Write one sentence for why each belongs. If those sentences sound the same, the shortlist is not finished.

BEST FIT / _____

WHY / _____

STRONGEST VALUE / _____

WHY / _____

SAFEST FALLBACK / _____

WHY / _____

WHEN YOU WANT A SECOND SET OF EYES

Tell me the destination and the three hotels you are considering.

I will ask the questions that hotel pages and star ratings do not answer. For most hotel-led trips, my planning is paid through the hotels and partners I book, not as an added planning fee from you.

You can also open a sample Carta trip hub and see how the hotel, restaurants, schedule, contacts, and personal notes fit together on the phone you are already carrying.
